CASES IN LITIGATION

November 15, 2002

The following is a list of cases in which attorneys with the Southern Center for Human Rights were involved during the last fiscal year

All of these cases involved efforts to enforce the provisions of the Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution on behalf of poor, minority and disadvantaged prisoners who cannot afford legal representation. In all of these cases, the public is benefitted by the provision of free legal services to those who otherwise would not have access to the legal system. In addition, the public interest is benefitted by the enforcement of the provisions of the United States Constitution and state and federal law that was obtained through these cases

In a number of the cases listed below, the Center has provided assistance to volunteer attorneys providing pro bono legal representation, some of whom were recruited by the Center to assist. In these cases, the public interest is served by the Center sharing its expertise and experience free of charge to improve the quality of legal services being rendered in those cases.

Civil Litigation

The following cases involved actions on behalf of prisoners challenging cruel and unusual conditions in prisons or jails in the southeast or other civil matters

Adams v DeKalb County, Superior Court of DeKalb County, Georgia. The Center represents inmates in enforcing a consent decree designed to correct numerous constitutional violations, including grossly inadequate medical care and brutality

Ball v Butler County, United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama. The Center continued to monitor conditions at the Butler County Jail, as a result of an agreement that resolved this case, which was brought to challenge the jail's longstanding and abysmal conditions of confinement, including inadequate medical care, lack of inmate classification procedures, lack of adequate security, a plumbing system that is unsanitary and in terrible disrepair, fire safety violations, an untrained and poorly supervised jail staff, and denial of inmate access to legal materials.

Barbour County v Haley, Circuit Court of Montgomery County, Alabama. The Center represented inmates in Alabama's prisons who sought to intervene in this suit brought by Alabama's sheriffs against its Department of Corrections to require the Department to remove state inmates from county jails. The Center sought to represent the interests of the prisoners. The Court did not rule on the motion to intervene during the fiscal year.

Bowling v Lee, Superior Court of Coweta County, Georgia The Center brought this suit on behalf of poor people accused of felony crimes in Coweta County, Georgia, challenging the county's failure to provide legal representation at all to some, the failure to provide counsel promptly to others, the failure to provide counsel at various pretrial proceedings, and the failure of counsel that was provided to represent inmates adequately, all in violation of the right to counsel of the Georgia and United States Constitutions

Brinkley v Harrelson, United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama. The Center brought this case on behalf of inmates at the Elmore Correctional Facility in Alabama, who were required to work at Elmore's recycling center and to sort through, with their hands, numerous hazardous waste materials, including human waste, laboratory and medical wastes, dead animals, used hypodermic needles and intravenous needles, maggot-infested foods, razors, industrial and household chemicals, seeking protective clothing and other remedies to protect their health and safety

Erwin v Haley, Montgomery County (Alabama) Circuit Court The Center brought this breach of contract lawsuit against the Alabama Department of Corrections for failing to provide medical treatment to inmates injured at the recycling facility at the Elmore Correctional Facility By failing to provide medical treatment, the DOC breached its obligations under the settlement agreement reached in Brinkley v Harrelson

Fluellen v Weatherington United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia The Center brought this class action lawsuit on behalf of over 300 severely mentally ill prisoners incarcerated at Phillips State Prison, located in Buford, Georgia. The lawsuit seeks relief from the inadequate mental health care and pervasive physical brutality at the prison

Foster v Fulton County, United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia. This class action lawsuit, filed on behalf of all HIV-positive persons confined at the Fulton County Jail in Atlanta, Georgia, obtained constitutionally required medical care for the inmates in a decree entered in January, 2000 The Center continues to monitor the provision of medical care at the jail

Laube v Haley United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama This class action lawsuit, on behalf of the approximately 2,000 female prisoners in Alabama, challenges the unconscionably high risk of harm faced by prisoners housed in the severely overcrowded facilities for women in Alabama

Marsh v Butler County, United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama The Center resolved this case by obtaining compensation for two men beaten at the Butler County Jail due to inadequate security

Marshall v Whisante, United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama. The Center litigated issues of contempt with regard to the county's compliance with a consent order that requires it to provide adequate medical care, increase staff, restrict the use of force and make other changes to end constitutional violations there

Maynor v Morgan County, United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama The Center brought this suit on behalf of inmates confined at the jail in Morgan County Alabama and obtained relief for gross overcrowding, deficient sanitation, ventilation, lighting, plumbing, fire safety, and other physical conditions, inadequate classification, staffing, and supervision, and denial of medical care The Center is actively monitoring the defendants compliance with the Court s Consent Order

Muldrow v Keohane, United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia The Center obtained damages for an inmate who was placed in four-point restraints for punishment and not for any legitimate penological purpose at the U S Penitentiary in Atlanta, and appealed on behalf of two other inmates whose complaints for similar treatment were dismissed

Parks v Fennessy, United States District Court for the Middle District of Georgia This case was filed in September 1996 to bring a state court into compliance with fundamental rulings on the Sixth Amendment right to counsel In October 1998, the Center obtained a consent order providing comprehensive relief to its clients The order requires court officials to inform criminal defendants of their fundamental constitutional rights and follow strict procedures to ensure that those rights are protected

Stinson v Fulton County, United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia The Center obtained a judgment in this case requiring Fulton County, Georgia, to provide lawyers to poor people accused of crimes during the time between being booked into the jail and indictment The Center is monitoring the county s compliance with the order

Terrell v Herring, United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama The Center filed this suit in 1993 against the Walker County Jail, the County Commissioners, the Sheriff and the Chief Jailer challenging the deprivation of any opportunity to exercise, insufficient living space, lack of proper medical care, an unsafe living environment, inadequate sanitation, plumbing and ventilation, and severe overcrowding due in large part to the presence of state inmates who constitute half of the jail's population The case was resolved by a consent decree, and the Center continues actively to monitor compliance with the decree
