Environment California

Primary Exempt Purpose

We all want clean air, clean water and open spaces. But it takes independent research and tough-minded advocacy to win concrete results for our environment, especially when powerful interests stand in the way of environmental progress. That's the idea behind Environment California. We focus exclusively on protecting California's air, water and open spaces. We speak out and take action at the local, state and national levels to improve the quality of our environment and our lives.

Ocean Protection:

Our oceans are critical to the survival of life on our planet. They are home to more than ninety-seven percent of all life on Earth, and help control our climate, provide more oxygen than rain forests, and shelter countless animal species. Unfortunately, our ecologically vital oceans are at risk.

In 2004, Gov. Schwarzenegger signed into law seven Environment California-backed bills that will strengthen ocean protections by placing restrictions on bottom trawling and protecting sensitive ocean habitat.

Clean Energy:

The Legislature finally passed the Million Solar Roofs bill (SB 1), authored by Sen. Kevin Murray and sponsored by Environment California. SB1 complements the CSI by mandating that solar panels become a standard option for all new homebuyers and raising the cap on the number of solar customers able to get a credit on their electric bill for excess power generated by their solar system, a process called net metering.

Turning the vision of building a million solar roofs into state law has been a long time coming, but in the end, this law was worth the wait and the fight that it took to turn a great idea into a landmark policy.

Forest Preservation:

California is blessed with unparalleled natural resources and beauty that with tremendous foresight we have managed to protect.

The commitment to preserve our natural resources, including our forests, is once again threatened by the oil and gas industries' attempt to roll back protections against drilling in California's national forests. Gov. Schwarzenegger has promised to protect our 4.4 million acres of unspoiled national forest yet the threat remains. Therefore, we support legislation that prohibits the state from spending money to permit drilling, road building and other extractive activities in our national forests.

Toxics & Environmental Health:

Environment California has continued our work to protect our most vulnerable populations from toxic chemicals, winning three significant victories.

This year we succeeded in including day care centers in the Healthy Schools Act of 2000, which requires schools to notify parents about pesticide applications. The new law also ensures that all day care providers have access to information and trainings on least-toxic Integrated Pest Management techniques to help them create a safer environment in which to care for children.

Thanks to the newly signed Chemical Detection Law, California now has the ability to get the tools it needs to detect potentially harmful chemicals that currently go unnoticed in our bodies and the environment. California is the first state in the country to enact such a law.

While the state Legislature failed to pass legislation that would have removed certain toxic chemicals—phthalates and bisphenol-A—from children's toys, the city of San Francisco decided to take action on its own. In June, San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom signed into law the Stop Toxics Toys bill that will enact this ban at the city level. Unfortunately, the toy industry has now sued the city to prevent the law from taking effect. We will keep a close eye on this case in the coming months.

Global Warming:

Gov. Schwarzenegger signed into law the Environment California-supported nation's first statewide cap on global warming pollution, a policy that will reduce emissions in California by 25 percent over the next 14 years.

Over the course of the campaign, we spoke with over 220,000 Californians, held important meetings with lawmakers and state leaders, wrote and released four reports, generated dozens of news stories, and placed ads in key newspapers across the state. Californians also made their voices heard and sent over 30,000 public comments to the governor asking him to act to stop global warming.

Description of program services:

Researching and influencing public policy: staff engage in activities including research, lobbying, education, legal and policy development on the following issues: clean energy, clean water, clean air, toxics & environmental health and forest preservation.
