Short Form Return of Organization Exempt From Income Tax

OMB No 1545-1150

2012

Open to Public Inspection

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

Under section 501(c), 527, or 4947(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code
(except black lung benefit trust or private foundation)
▶ Sponsoring organizations of donor advised funds, organizations that operate one or more hospital facilities, and certain controlling organizations as defined in section 512(b)(13) must file Form 990 (see instructions).
All other organizations with gross receipts less than $200,000 and total assets less than $500,000 at the end of the year may use this form.
▶ The organization may have to use a copy of this return to satisfy state reporting requirements.

CIS 2003 International Observer Mission Report

Mysteriously, the unsealed box 4554 from Ozatlan, which had been brought out during the morning meeting, contained the two missing impugned votes from Estanzuelas. The TSE magistrates unanimously voted to accept the impugned votes from the box. The FMLN representatives walked out of the proceedings so as not to legitimate the fraud. Without reviewing the entire contents of the box, apparently the "impugned votes" from Ozatlan contained 1 vote for MR and 1 vote for ARENA.

At the end of the evening's proceedings, the magistrates declared ARENA the winner without explaining how or why the ballot box from Ozatlan was opened or how the Estanzuelas ballots got into a box from Ozatlan. Clearly, the evidence and the ballot box were contaminated and the two so-called impugned votes could have been easily switched with valid votes in order to secure the outcome desired.

- Closing procedures: Lack of organization, process and security (see Annex 8)
 - Too many people in the voting centers – Mission Observers reported that the voting centers were full of people after the doors closed at 5pm. It was unclear who many of these people were as they did not have JRV or vigilante identification. As a result, the volume of people added to the general confusion in the centers during the voting process, making the counting process much more difficult to control. Frequently, there were 10 or more people standing around the tables watching the vote counting, but, again, it was unclear who many of these people were.
 - Lack of clear neutral authority in the voting centers – The closing process is complex. With two ballot boxes, many political parties, and a great deal of paperwork to fill out after a long day of work, there was a lot of confusion and many questions about the closing procedures. It seemed that the JRVs were largely left on their own to struggle through problems. There was no clear and strong presence of a neutral electoral authority that was available to answer questions and guide JRVs through the closing process steps. Usually one TSE representative was present to collect their copies of the Acts, but this was clearly not enough to handle the questions and problems even in relatively small voting centers.
 - Training & guidelines for addressing impugned and null ballots – Determining the intention of the voter in unclear ballots was a significant problem during the counting process. Not only did many JRVs not know the difference between an impugned vote and a null vote, but they also didn't know how to process or record such votes. As a result, there can be little doubt that many votes that did not show clear intention were handled and recorded incorrectly. Further, Mission Observers reported cases of intentional fraud in which votes showing a clear intention were classified as null or impugned because of aggressive JRV members. Because only impugned votes can be recounted, any misidentification or improper recording of such of such votes whether accidental or intentional can have a significant impact on the outcome of elections, especially in light of the number of municipalities that were decided by only a small number of votes. Therefore, better training, and better oversight are needed in the counting process.
 - Burdensome and difficult paperwork – The JRVs had to complete a huge volume of paperwork after counting the ballots, making 3 original duplicates for each of the two elections. In the best of conditions, this is a challenging task, but with poor training, poor lighting conditions and after working 12+ hours, completing this volume of paperwork without errors is nearly impossible. In some voting centers, the filling out of paperwork began before the official 5pm voting center closing time in order to hurry up the Acta delivery process.
 - Interference of party representatives – The completion of the Actas by the JRVs was further compromised by the frequent interruptions of the party Supervisors looking for the latest vote counts. In addition, the Supervisors of the losing parties often become hostile towards the JRV members. There was no regulation of Supervisor interaction with the JRVs, leaving them free to interfere as they pleased. This added to the overall confusion and tension of the counting process.

- Lack of procedures for closing and sealing boxes after counting – The boxes containing the counted ballots were closed and sealed in a very haphazard manner. Many boxes seen in the voting centers and the JEM collection centers were not properly sealed. In some cases, ballots were literally falling out of the boxes while in others, the boxes were not sealed at all or not sealed well enough to keep someone from getting into them easily. Given the late hour, the fatigue of all the people involved, the transportation of the ballots and the darkness, the chances for fraud at this final stage of the voting day are frightfully obvious. In fact, as post-election news articles revealed, ballots and boxes were found in garbage cans in several municipalities. In the case of Estanzuelas (discussed in the next section), ballots were actually found in an opened box belonging to a different municipality located 40 kms away. It must be very strongly emphasized that more secure procedures must be put into place to secure all voting boxes to ensure no fraud happens in this critical final stage of the voting process.
